WOMEN MAY EXCHANGE VIEWS ON THE HOUSEHOLD MATTERS

Beginning with next Sunday the Woman's page of The Times-Dispatch will broaden its scope so as to include a fuller development of household interests through the interchange of womanly ideas on subjects pertaining to all departments of domestic life, which naturally interest intelligent thinkers and doers in Richmond and Virginia.

It is proposed to render the page a medium, where questions may be asked and answered, and where problems may be advantageously solved, by means of discussion and expression which will give the result of experience as to what is most efficacious in household methods and government.

Contributions, not exceeding two hundred words in length, on what comes uppermost in the feminine mind as being of prime importance—recipies which have made tables over which Virginia women have presided famous for generations, the acquisitions of which would be an undoubted help to women at large wherever

The Times-Dispatch is read; recipies also for pot-pourri, for the cleaning of carpets and brasses; hints as to the latest ideas in fancy work, in house decoration, in floral adornment for the table and parlor—will be gladly received and published over the name of the contributor.

To the household query and answer column, special care will be given, with the aim and intention of rendering it a practical and not a theoretical assistance for those who wish to obtain information.

The fashion cuts and reading matter of the page will undergo change only in being improved, and the very best and latest ideas on styles, American and Parisian, will not be lacking.

A cordial invitation for any and everything mentioned is extended confidently, the editor of the woman's page feeling sure that the co-operation of the women here and throughout the State is just what is needed to produce the finest and most enduring results for the page.
